

About Miguel Wilson:

Miguel Wilson is an award-winning celebrity menswear fashion designer, philanthropist, author and founder of Ride to The Olympics foundation. Wilson is well-known for his custom-tailored formal wear, sports coats, trousers, shirts and fine men’s accessories from his label, The Miguel Wilson Collection.

A native of Washington, DC, Wilson holds a bachelor’s degree from Clark Atlanta University and an MBA from Campbell University. He was also served as a 2nd Lieutenant in the U.S. Army Reserves with the Military Police Corps.

He is the proud father of five children and 2 grandchildren.

He has flagship stores in Atlanta and National Harbor, Maryland and offers a signature wedding collection for groomsmen at exclusive bridal boutiques throughout the country.

As a fashion industry trailblazer, Wilson’s impeccable eye for detail, extravagance and bold design aesthetics have afforded him the opportunity to build an impressive customer base of high-profile businessmen, community leaders, politicians, athletes and celebrities worldwide.

He has authored one book including “Because It’s His Day Too,” to spark a movement to help men feel special and achieve a memorable look on their wedding day in addition to bride.

His “Because It’s His Day Too” motto and brand have evolved into a movement to help men feel special and achieve a memorable look on their wedding day in addition to the bride.

Offering Groom Lounge events at his stores and many of the groom’s participate the “Groom Review” segment his fashion shows.

In addition to fashion, Wilson is very passionate about equestrian sports and serving youth. He founded the Ride to The Olympics Foundation in 2017 to provide exposure and training programs centered around equestrian sports, fashion and leadership development to underrepresented youth. He and his foundation also launched the first HBCU Polo Team at Morehouse College in Atlanta.
